

Module 6 Rationale

When deciding on what colors to include on my site, I knew that I wanted a palette that not only included bright and fun colors but one that would be able to convey a little bit about who I am and relay a small aspect of my style/taste. I decided to use a few of my favorite colors together to create a cheerful, upbeat theme that would be visually stimulating. I made yellow my background color because it really helps to light up each page while also helping the purple and blue shades to kind of pop out at you, stand out distinctly and create contrast.

As I moved on to choosing my fonts, I knew I wanted to create a statement with the header that was slightly more elegant to show a more serious side of me since I portrayed my fun traits through my color selections. I wanted to also keep it pretty simple as far as my fonts go without being too boring so I used Monotype Corsiva and Brush Script std. I made sure to keep my header font the same on each page as well as for the tabs and buttons to incorporate consistency and repetition. Thinking about alignment helped in precisely placing my pictures and text. I tried to keep the major pieces of each page centered. When laying out the different parts of each page, I didn't want to mix it up too much and decided to keep related objects fairly close together and keeping unrelated ones separate. I wanted my tabs at the top in a row, for example, as well as my three circle buttons grouped in the top left to allow for a navigable site.
